Blended-Learning Pilot Sessions

At KAINOTOMIA, we recently had the pleasure of hosting a series of blended-learning pilot sessions designed to introduce participants to our online platform. These sessions took place over two consecutive days at our offices, bringing together educators eager to explore new teaching methodologies and tools.

Day 1: Introduction and Hands-On Exploration

Participants were invited to attend the sessions via email, and the training commenced with a warm welcome and a presentation about the project. This set the stage for introducing the online platform, where attendees were encouraged to explore its features.

To facilitate this hands-on experience, laptops were provided, allowing participants to register on the platform and navigate its content at their own pace. Our trainers—Mike Triantafillou, Katerina Michale, and Eleni Balafa—were on hand to guide them and address any questions.

The session included a comprehensive preview of all the available materials, with a detailed walkthrough of Module 7. The training lasted approximately two hours, providing participants with time to engage with the platform. To ensure ongoing support, attendees were encouraged to continue exploring the platform from the comfort of their homes and provide detailed feedback.

Day 2: Feedback and Evaluation

The following day, participants returned for a feedback and evaluation session. This interactive session was dedicated to discussing their experiences and opinions about the platform. Both participants and trainers shared their insights, creating a collaborative atmosphere to refine the platform further.

Evaluation questionnaires were introduced during the session, allowing participants to provide their comprehensive assessments after thoroughly exploring the platform. To ensure continuous support, contact information for the trainers and the organization's phone number were shared.

Attendance and Flexibility

The two-session format proved beneficial, as not all educators could attend the first day. Seven participants joined the initial session, and they returned the next day to share their insights alongside additional attendees. This approach ensured everyone had an opportunity to contribute and be heard.

Moving Forward

The blended-learning pilot sessions marked an essential milestone in testing and refining the online platform. The feedback gathered during these sessions will play a crucial role in enhancing the platform's usability and effectiveness, paving the way for a more dynamic learning experience for educators and students alike.

We extend our gratitude and look forward to implementing valuable insights as we continue on this journey of innovation in education.
